The Jaguar XK 150 is probably the epitome of a thoroughbred British sports car. As the spearhead of the XK series and the immediate predecessor of the legendary E-Type, the XK 150 set new standards with its performance data. The 3.4-litre "S version" produced an incredible 254 hp in 1958. Initially only available as a coupé (FHC) and convertible (DHC), the model range was extended in 1958 to include the roadster (Open Two Seater, OTS), which now had crank windows on the doors for the first time. Only 888 units of the XK 150 OTS in the more powerful and exclusive "S" version were produced up to 1961.

We have the honour of presenting one of these OTS roadsters to you here.

This car was delivered to its first owner in Savannah, Georgia, via Jaguar Cars USA in New York at the end of 1958. This Jaguar Heritage Trust certificate confirms the delivery and first ownership.

The certificate also lists the relevant unit numbers, which shows that the XK 150 still has both the original engine and the original transmission. The latter was ordered with overdrive at the time, so that the roadster can also be driven perfectly in today's road traffic.

In 1990, the car was initially imported from the USA to Germany in the district of Ravensburg (Upper Swabia). A good ten years later, in 2000, the vehicle then travelled to Denmark, where it changed hands within the country in 2008. The Jaguar then returned to Germany in 2019, where it was given a German registration and an H licence plate. Since then, the car has been with the current owner.

Since the vehicle has been back in Germany, the XK has been extensively maintained, serviced and partially restored. Corresponding documentation is also available. You can see the exceptionally good condition of the vehicle at first glance.

Both visually and technically, the roadster is in outstandingly good condition and is perfect for anyone who wants to enjoy unlimited driving pleasure. There are probably few vehicles that combine such a purist driving experience with very impressive engine power. For us, the XK 150 is the ideal vehicle for sporty rallies or leisurely drives. Even at just under 2 metres tall, the XK 150 offers an enormous amount of space compared to its predecessors and ensures pure driving pleasure!
